DOMAIN PARTNER HIGHLIGHT

Dan Bennett
Media/Marketing Coordinator
UCSD School of Medicine
Communities Putting Prevention to Work

Although Dan Bennett is one of the newer partners of the Media domain, he is not new to San Diego. Dan grew up in Escondido, graduating from Orange Glen High School and San Diego State University, now residing with his family in Oceanside. In August, Dan accepted the position of Media/Marketing Coordinator with the UCSD School of Medicine for the Communities Putting Prevention to Work grant (CPPW).

With more than 20 years as a reporter for the North County Times covering health, art, and education, who better than Dan to coordinate the media and marketing activities for the CPPW? CPPW is a program that has awarded 44 communities across the nation with funding through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. CPPW, which is funded and coordinated through the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), is geared toward either tobacco prevention or obesity prevention. The San Diego County Health and Human Services Agency (HHS) applied at the end of 2009 and was awarded in March 2010 with $16.1 million, the highest amount of money awarded to any community in the nation for obesity interventions!

The purpose of CPPW is to create healthier communities through sustainable, proven, population-based approaches such as broad-based policy, systems, organizational and environmental changes in communities and schools. Each of the CPPW contractors (UCSD, San Diego County Office of Education, San Diego Association of Governments, San Diego State University's Graduate School of Public Health, and Community Health Improvement Partners) will coordinate with COI partners throughout the grant period.

"We are so happy to have Dan on the team," states Sandra Parkington, Domain Champion, Media Domain. "He is very personable and we look forward to sharing ideas and figuring out ways to work together in the coming months."

Dan's responsibilities include the coordination of the CPPW countywide media campaign to promote healthy eating and active lifestyles. The local campaign will incorporate national messaging as provided by the CDC which will be tailored for the San Diego market. In support of local advertising, the campaign will also host earned media events highlighting CPPW interventions and CDC media messages.

In addition to covering health, arts and education, Dan also worked on movie reviews for the North County Times. He parlayed his interest in family and films 8 years ago, founding the San Diego International Children's Film Festival. This 3-week festival featuring family-friendly short films takes place every summer in Balboa Park and is free to the public.

Dan stays active with his two kids and plays softball in a local city league. He also loves to cheer on his hometown Padres and Chargers.

DOMAIN
UPDATE
Community Domain

The Community Domain is comprised of community, faith, youth, grassroots and public organizations committed to the prevention and reduction of childhood obesity. This domain functions to serve the entire community, exactly as its name implies. This is no small feat, but by enlisting and empowering community residents and local organizations to create healthier environments in their neighborhoods, this domain houses a large team of dedicated partners.

One large portion of the Community Domain's current activities lies in the relationship it has formed with some of the region's faith communities. Domain stakeholders recognize the cohesion that exists among all ages in communities of faith. The initiative has worked with faith groups in both North County and more recently, in the South Bay to help them understand the connection between faith, health and the power of team work in effecting positive community change. These groups are known as Faith Advisory Councils, and they are organized to work cooperatively with the Initiative and other critical partners, such as SDSU Research Foundation's Cambios con Fe (change with faith) program and WALKSanDiego.

Although the funding that has supported programs such as Cambios con Fe has now ended, the Initiative and its partners are committed to making these relationships sustainable. Cambios con Fe partner churches are planning park clean-ups with their respective adopted parks. In addition, project partners are working with the Catholic Dioceses of San Diego to discuss formal approval and support for wellness committees at the parish level.

Another activity of the Community Domain which has some exciting developments on the horizon is the Youth Engagement & Action for Health (YEAH!) training program. The YEAH! project includes a training manual and trainings for youth engagement projects focusing on improvements to neighborhood nutrition and physical activity environments. Two training workshops were held in North County and East County, respectively, in February 2010. The evaluation consultants working closely with the Initiative designed and implemented a training evaluation tool for participants who attended those trainings. The instrument provided information on how the training was received, potential advocacy projects under consideration, types of future support needed by trainees, and readiness to move forward with advocacy projects.

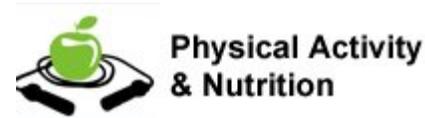

SDSU Research Foundation submitted a proposal in partnership with COI to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Active Living Research funding program for ongoing evaluation of projects implemented post-training. SDSU received the funding last month, which is exciting news for the domain and the YEAH! project. The COI will use funds to evaluate the YEAH! program, and with the help of COI's evaluation team, domain partners are looking to work with 10 to 12 groups of youth to evaluate the effectiveness of the training and projects.

COI will be providing technical assistance on both training and projects, and is scheduled to hold two more trainings in December 2010.

Recently, the Initiative and partners of the domain considered that the YEAH! project could perhaps be one way to sustain the relationship with the faith communities that has developed through working with Cambios con Fe and the Faith Advisory Councils. COI and WALKSanDiego will partner to conduct 3 YEAH! trainings and assist with 2 community improvement projects in faith communities and beyond.

These are just some of the concentrated efforts of the Community Domain, but the opportunities to engage community residents are endless. To learn more about this domain and its exciting activities, contact Melanie Cohn.

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

As we come to the end of this year's legislative session, State legislators still have not agreed on a budget plan. Legislators have once again set a record for the longest this state has gone without a budget plan in place as California begins jeopardizing public works projects and contemplates issuing IOUs again to people owed tax refunds. Organizations across the state are feeling the impacts as the state has put a stop to checks supporting state-funded programs until the budget is passed.

September 30th was the last day for the Governor to sign or veto bills passed by the Legislature before September 1st. Here are the highlights of obesity-related State legislation:

AB 2084 (Brownley) - This bill would require licensed child day care facilities to follow specified requirements related to beverages served –e.g., only 1% or skim milk, no more than 1 serving of 100% juice a day, no beverages with added sweeteners, and the continuous availability of clean and safe water. This bill would allow for medical exceptions and was signed by the Governor on September 30th. It will take effect on January 1st, 2012.

SB 1413 (Leno)- This bill would require a school district to provide access to free, fresh drinking water during meal times in school food service areas by July 1st, 2011. This bill would allow for exceptions due to fiscal constraints or health and safety concerns. It was also signed by the Governor on September 30th.

AB 537 (Arambula)- This bill would allow an interested collective group or association of produce sellers that is Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) authorized and in a flea market, farmers' market, or certified farmers' to initiate and operate an EBT acceptance system. The Governor signed this bill on September 29th.

AB 2147 (Perez)- Would require, when rating Safe Routes to School (SRTS) proposals, the consideration of the proposal's benefit to a low-income school and the use of a public participation process. The Governor vetoed AB 2147. The veto message stated that the bill may be unnecessary because a recent review of the SRTS Program determined that low-income schools have received 35 percent and 44 percent of all SRTS grants awarded over the past five years through the state and federal programs, respectively. He also said there could be negative impacts from prioritizing these schools over other, possibly more worthy projects.

AB 2720 (Perez / Bass)- This bill would create the California Health Foods Financing Initiative Fund, should California receive any of the $400 million nationwide seed money, to expand healthy food options in current urban and rural food deserts by increasing the number of grocery stores in low-income areas. This bill was vetoed by the Governor. His veto message reiterated his commitment to healthy and affordable food access for low-income communities, but said that the bill was premature and unnecessary because the Healthy Food Financing Initiative has not yet been acted on by Congress.

AB 2468 (De Leon)- This bill would authorize an employer to use the designation "Breast-Feeding Mother-Friendly Workplace" in its promotional materials if the employer submits its workplace breast-feeding policy to the Labor Commissioner and the Labor Commissioner determines that the employer's policy provides for specified criteria. AB 2468 was vetoed by the Governor. His veto message argued that this bill would do nothing to improve existing laws protecting a lactating mother's right to express milk in the workplace and it would only create additional responsibility for the Labor Commissioner.

At the federal level, there have been struggles with health care legislation. Although the President and First Lady support obesity prevention measures, the issue of funding is a key concern for legislators. These are two federal proposals of interest:

HR 5297 (Johanns, R-NE)- This amendment was proposed as an offset of the Small Business Jobs and Creation Act. Funds would have been redistributed from the Prevention and Public Health Fund, $15 billion distributed over 10 years to build the capacity of local public health and support community-based prevention activities. The Senate defeated this amendment on September 13th.

Child Nutrition Act- Provides $4.5 billion over 10 years to create new standards for all foods in schools, including vending machine items, and expand the number of low-income children eligible for free or reduced cost meals. A version of this bill was passed in Congress in August, but Senators are resisting the bill because it is funded in part with $2.2 billion in cuts to SNAP, the federal food stamp program. The Senate did not approve the bill by the deadline to reauthorize the Child Nutrition Act on September 30th. The current nutrition programs are expected to receive a short-term extension of funding from another Congressional bill. There is one more window for passage of this bill: when Congress returns after the election for a so-called "lame duck" session.

FARMERS MARKET CORNER

Fellow farmers' market lovers and Initiative newsletter readers may recall our report

Initiative newsletter readers may recall our report on the food access initiative budding in Southeastern San Diego, the People's Produce Project (PPP). PPP is suitably named, as it implies more than just the establishment of a farmers' market; it is a collaborative aiming to promote personal and community wellness by increasing fresh food access through urban farms, edible landscapes, and community gardens. Our last report on this exciting project left us hanging in suspense; since then, exciting opportunities have sprouted in San Diego, allowing stakeholders of the PPP to begin paving the road they've planned.

The County of San Diego Department of Public Health was recently awarded $16.1 million in federal funding through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. Communities Putting Prevention to Work (CPPW), the name of the funded program, will bring resources to our region that will allow communities to work together to reduce obesity and increase opportunities for good nutrition and physical activity. This is a big win for an initiative like the People's Produce Project.

"The People's Produce Project is very fortunate to be a part of the County CPPW grant. We believe this initiative will lay the foundation for continued work towards integrating systems in a manner that promotes better health and better food options," said Diane Moss, the director of Project New Village, the organization administering PPP.

The Communities Putting Prevention to Work will nourish PPP in ways that will turn its vision into reality by connecting its stakeholders to regional resources outside of Southeastern San Diego. Diane reported that some of their partners will include County of San Diego Health & Human Services Agency, Network for a Healthy California, San Diego Association of Governments (SANDAG), SDSU, and the San Diego County Office of Education.

In an effort to clearly demonstrate where / how the grant funds will be used, partners working on PPP decided to concentrate the CPPW-supported activities at O'Farrell Community School, located in the Skyline community just outside the Diamond district in Southeastern San Diego.

"This school is already a hub for community activity. We are partnering with the school to create a community garden and farmer's market; conduct 15 healthy cooking classes; and create a community cookbook. This allows the People's Produce Project to expand its reach to serve the neighborhoods in the most eastern part of Southeastern San Diego," Diane explained.

People's Produce Project has been helped along with CPPW funding, but is dedicated to success no matter what. Stakeholders that have been involved in PPP are continuing to work throughout the 4th district with the support of many partners, including Supervisor Ron Roberts and Councilman Tony Young. With the momentum of the community behind it since December 2008, PPP will launch its first farmers' market in November 2010 on property owned by the Jacobs Neighborhood Innovation Center.

PPP is also working with the Jackie Robinson YMCA to establish its first collaborative garden project. The intended plan is to establish this garden as a certified producer, making it eligible to sell produce at the farmer's market. Additional goals for the future include connecting with youth groups and residents to create many community and personal gardens that qualify to be certified producers.
