DOMAIN UPDATE

Media Domain

The Media Domain is always on the lookout for opportunities to capture the discussion of childhood obesity and its environmental factors in traditional, social, and emerging media. New forms of media develop almost as quickly as the issues that need coverage; the creative membership of this domain is always working hard to be among the voices that advocate for community understanding of obesity as a product of the social and environmental factors that affect all of us.

This domain works to bring light to the Initiative and its many partners by sharing its work with local media. There are many organizations working in partnership to effect environmental and policy changes. Last month, Initiative partners working under the purview of this domain coordinated coverage of the Halloween Candy Buy Back program taking place in San Diego County. This is a national effort that enables dentists to register to buy excess, unopened Halloween candy back from children and their families in order to ship over as a treat to US troops via a nonprofit called Operation Gratitude. The local efforts were spearheaded by Sabrina Covington RD, a founder of the Healthy Kids' Choice Initiative as well as a dedicated Business Domain partner. Thirteen dental offices across the county participated as well as a pediatrician's office (the pediatrician is the Initiative's private sector co-chair and former Media Domain chair, Dr. Christine Wood). Although the total amount of candy collected is still unknown, partners are hopeful for big numbers. San Diego 6 News, Fox 5 San Diego, and Voice & Viewpoint all featured stories about this work.

Over the summer, the Initiative also updated its own media by revamping the COI website. The new website has been designed to be a comprehensive portal that explains the work of each domain and is rich in resources across a number of sectors working on obesity prevention. The Media Domain has been tracking the website and thinking of new and creative ways it can be used as a medium to communicate and coordinate efforts.

These are just a few of the exciting ways that the media domain makes its voice heard. To learn more about this domain and its exciting activities, contact Melanie Cohn.

RESOURCES

211 San Diego: Nutrition, Healthy Weight, Physical Activity, and Diabetes Resource

The San Diego County Childhood Obesity Initiative, Rady Children's Hospital San Diego, The American Academy of Pediatrics, San Diego Diabetes Coalition, Champions for Change/Network for a Healthy California, and Community Health Improvement Partners have joined with 211 San Diego, a 24/7 multilingual phone service and searchable online health and human service database, to create a comprehensive obesity and diabetes information and referral database. This resource provides San Diego County residents, healthcare providers and social services agencies a FREE "one stop shop" for programs and services in nutrition, healthy weight, physical activity, and diabetes. These free resources can be accessed via phone by dialing "2-1-1" or clicking on the green apple icon above.

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

Election Day has come and gone, producing a number of new acts of legislation that will impact the health of our communities, state, and nation.

Proposition 21: Would establish an $18 annual surcharge on vehicle registration to support State parks and wildlife programs. Surcharged vehicles would be granted free day-pass admission to State parks. Outcome: failed.

Proposition 22: Would prohibit the state from borrowing or taking funds used for transportation, redevelopment or local government projects and services. Outcome: passed.

Proposition 23: Would suspend implementation of AB 32 requiring major sources of emissions to report and reduce greenhouse gas emissions that cause global warming, until unemployment drops to 5.5% or less for a full year. Outcome: failed.

Two bills that were passed in 2008 will go into effect on January 1, 2011:

- SB 1420 requires restaurant chains with 20 or more locations to post calorie information on their menus and indoor menu boards.
- SB 441 requires each vendor who operates or maintains a vending machine on state property to satisfy the requirement that at least 35 percent of the food and at least one-third of the beverages offered in the vending machines meet accepted nutritional guidelines.

San Francisco toy ban: On November 2nd, the San Francisco Board of Supervisors gave preliminary approval banning toy giveaways in Happy Meals and similar fast-food offerings aimed at kids unless they meet nutrition guidelines. The board is scheduled to take a final vote next week. If passed, the restrictions wouldn't go into effect until December 2011. Under the proposed ordinance, restaurants may give away a free toy or other incentive item only if the meal contains less than 600 calories, has less than 640 milligrams of sodium and if less than 35 percent of the calories are derived from fat (less than 10 percent from saturated fat), except for fat contained in nuts, seeds, eggs or low-fat cheese. In beverages, less than 35 percent of the total calories can come from fat, and less than 10 percent from added sweeteners. In addition, the meals must contain a half-cup or more of fruit and three-quarters of a cup or more of vegetables. A breakfast meal must contain at least a half-cup of fruit or vegetables.

Healthy, Hunger-free Kids Act: The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act (S. 3307) has been passed by the Senate and will be taken up by the House of Representatives when they reconvene in mid-November. This bill includes the first increase in reimbursement for school meals in more than 30 years, as well as changes to the WIC program. Here are some highlights of the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act:

- Updated USDA school meal standards should be released by the end of this year. Increased reimbursement rates included in this bill would allow schools to serve more fruits, vegetables, and whole grains.
- Includes funding for 120,000 more low-income children to receive free school meals each year.
- Would update nutrition standards for all food sold in schools (school meals, vending machines, a la carte lines, etc.).
- Includes funding for 29 million additional after school meals each year.
- Includes $40 million for Farm to School programs.
- Streamlines WIC certification periods.
- Would update the requirements of school wellness policies by requiring all local educational agencies participating in school meals programs to provide opportunities for public input and transparency in the formulation of policies, as well as a plan for implementation and measuring compliance.

FARMERS MARKET CORNER

As our readers may know by now, the Initiative and its partners work to support a number of community-driven initiatives that increase access to fresh, affordable, and culturally-appropriate foods. The need for this work is ever-present; efforts and opportunities to expand upon it are always a welcome surprise.

The International Rescue Committee (IRC) is a steward of some of the above-mentioned community-driven initiatives that promote healthy lifestyles and food self-sufficiency. In June 2008, the IRC established the City Heights Farmers' Market to combat some of the health and food access inequities within the community. This market was the first San Diego farmers' market to be situated within a low-income community and to accept Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT). In response to significant food-insecurity in City Heights, the CHFM launched a cash incentive program called "Fresh Fund," designed to make the benefits of fresh, locally grown produce accessible to everyone in the neighborhood.

The Fresh Fund program is important for San Diego County, particularly in the current economic climate.

"Many families are facing great food insecurity, i.e. not knowing where their next meal will come from. Fresh Fund provides San Diego's at-risk population access to healthy, local food options by matching the money they spend at the farmers' market. Having an outlet that provides additional resources to afford fresh produce means that families are making healthier choices," explains Mallory Cochrane of the International Rescue Committee. "These choices lead to improved nutrition, lower obesity levels, and aids in disease prevention."

These fundamental benefits of Fresh Fund reach not only eligible residents, but also farmers and the community--64% of Fresh Fund participants say they could not afford to purchase fresh fruits and vegetables at the market without the support of Fresh Fund. When participants spend Fresh Fund dollars at the market, the money goes directly to the growers instead of retailers, packaging and shipping. Fresh Fund supports the local economy and benefits the environment by reducing global warming from food shipments.

The County of San Diego Department of Public Health was recently awarded $16.1 million in federal funding through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. Communities Putting Prevention to Work (CPPW), the name of the funded program, will bring resources to our region that will allow communities to work together to reduce obesity and increase opportunities for good nutrition and physical activity. This is a big win for an initiative like the Fresh Fund.

What will CPPW do for the Fresh Fund? Currently, there are two markets in San Diego County, City Heights and San Marcos that offer the program to over 2000 participants. Since inception, Fresh Fund has provided the community with over $110,000 to buy fresh, local produce. The program will enjoy an expansion to a total of 6 markets by the end of the CPPW contract term (March 2012). Stakeholders working on the grant have already identified the next three markets for implementation, and are working to roll out the program in the coming months. The next markets to offer the Fresh Fund program will be Linda Vista (this will be a brand new market started by the IRC and SD Farm Bureau), Southeast (Fridays, but will probably switch to People's Produce Project's second market when it opens in March), and Vista.

For more information on the exciting food-access initiatives underway countywide, please contact our CPPW Food Policy Manager, JuliAnna Arnett.
